TWELFTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME
YEAR A | JUNE 25, 2023

One of my favorite films is the 2015 drama The Revenant starring Leonardo DiCaprio and directed by Alejandro González Iñárritu. The film's main character Hugh Glass (DiCaprio) struggles for survival in the 19th century frontier after a vicious bear attack leaves him clinging to life in the midst of brutal winter conditions. The fellow fur trapper John Fitzgerald (played by a menacing Tom Hardy) finds the injured Glass, buries him alive, steals their take, and kills Glass's indigenous son Hawk to cover his own tracks. After Glass crawls out of the earth, he hunts Fitzgerald with a singular motivation beyond survival: revenge. As the striking visuals and title of the film itself suggests (a revenant is one who returns from the dead), there is something supernaturally chilling about the journey that Glass undertakes.

In one of the film's most crucial moments, Glass meets an indigenous shaman, Hikuc, who is mourning the death of his family, killed at the hands of a rival tribe. Glass asks him what he plans to do. "My heart bleeds," Hikuc tells him, "but revenge is in the hands of the Creator." At this point Glass, feverish and faint, is brought into the womb-like shelter of an improvised sweat lodge that Hikuc provides for him in the midst of a storm.

I am reminded of this grim story when I hear the Scriptures for today's readings. Revenge and opposition are themes that emerge amidst Jeremiah's trials (in the context of the Babylonian invasion of the Kingdom of Judah), an individual's plea for justice (in the Psalm), and Jesus' words about destruction, Gehenna, and denial (in the Gospel). The stark dualism of justice for the righteous/destruction for God's enemies is balanced by Paul's words to the Roman church, who are challenged in their cultural understanding of law (which of course was Rome's big contribution to civilization) in the asymmetry of God's actions in Christ:

"But the gift is not like the transgression. For if by the transgression of the one the many died, how much more did the grace of God and the gracious gift of the one man Jesus Christ overflow for the many (Rom 5:15)."

In The Revenant, Hikuc functions as a Christ-figure who stands as an interruption to Glass' drive toward revenge and death. As an indigenous character in the midst of colonial expansion, he suffers the horrors of his people to an extreme degree; he has every motivation to seek revenge for what he has suffered. But instead of recycling his pain into more death and destruction, he acknowledges that he is not God, that the renewing energy of the cosmos is not restored by retribution, and that healing can come about in an act of compassion toward a stranger.

The challenge for Glass for the rest of the film—and I don't want to spoil the ending if you haven't seen it!—is whether or not he can follow such a Christ-figure into a future beyond his own pain and grief, and indeed beyond the grief of a suffering world. We have all internalized this pain in varying degrees, and we all struggle not to let it rule us. As Jeremiah and the Psalmist were no strangers to such pain, they knew in humility that restoration and justice can only come by God's hand, in God's time. Perhaps Jesus' words "what I say to you in darkness, speak in the light (Matt 10:27)" can be understood to mean even if you do not see the way now, you can trust me, and you can guide the way for others. There is more that can be mended than you know.

-Karl A. Gurney, M.A. Director of Liturgy
